The dialogue with Islam in the Antiochian Church

Boulos Wehbe, Notre Dame University, Beirut

Boulos Wehbe is senior lecturer at the Faculty of Humanities of the Notre Dame University of Beirut. He has been at NDU for ten years and in university teaching since 1983. He has also been director of the Student Affairs Office at NDU. His interests include ecumenical dialogue, Christian-Muslim dialogue, cultural/sociological/anthropological issues, and liturgy. He has participated in numerous conferences, consultations, and workshops, in addition to giving many lectures, in Lebanon, USA, and in several Arab and European countries. He is affiliated with the Faith and Unity unit at the Middle East Council of Churches (MECC) and has worked closely with the World Council of Churches (WCC), the Lebanese and the Arab Forums for Muslim-Christian dialogue, as well as with many other local, regional and international bodies. He is the coordinator of the Joint Christian Education Committee, which produces ecumenical Christian educational books under the auspices of the Synod of the Patriarch of the East, and is a priest in the Antiochian Orthodox Archdiocese of Beirut. He has written and published numerous articles.
